^{} Based on the most recent quarter's total assets.

^{}In March 2009, OTS realigned and consolidated its five regions into four. The historical regional data presented here were estimated by assinging firms to regions according to the state of their headquaters.

^{}In March 2009, OTS realigned and consolidated its five regions into four. The historical regional data presented here were estimated by assinging firms to regions according to the state of their headquaters.
